ATTACKS ON LATENTS BECOME MORE BRUTAL AS VIOLENCE INTENSIFIES

Clint Rousseau (Atlanta) - The Atlanta Dept of Homeland Quarantine and Stewardship disrupted and arrested a mob of armed gunmen in the Atlanta suburb of Henrietta who were in the process of executing a family of latents which had been hiding in the basement of a local church.

The officer in charge, Jason Holcomb, said in a news conference that "violence against latent's has been intensifying in disturbing new ways." He then went on to describe that the latest spate of anti-latent included something called 'Neck-tying' where a car tire is tied over the neck of the latent, after which the tire is set on fire.

Officer Holcomb, who stated that DHQS was able to intervene in time to save several latents, emphasized that latents can be productive members of our society as long as they are willing to live by rules intended to keep everyone safe.

Hours after the arrest, a group of anti-latent activists known as 'Triage' released a statement on Ubiq along with footage of the murders (available at ubiq://tinylink.com/q3\$hj^r_-1). "Look at this footage," the statement reads "and ask yourself what would have happened if this latent had died before we could properly restrain them. A vector in the heart of Atlanta is a danger we should not allow. God has placed the Mark of Cain on these people so that we may know them and cast them out of our societies. We intend to do just that."

Surviving latents have been taken to a work camp in the Loss for their own safety and the safety of the community.

MEEK ATTACK LEAVES 1200 DEAD

Samantha Grey (New New Orleans) - Late yesterday night an ultralight glider flew over the Mississippi delta towing a live Vector behind it. The vector was dropped in the 9th ward and killed 1,200 before infection could be contained, largely due to recent implementation of 'Quarentecture' improvements that enabled the ward to be locked down quickly and securely.

"While the loss of life was regrettable," Mayor Gravel stated at a press conference, "our ability to contain the outbreak shows that taxpayer investments in the city safeguards designed by Rem Coolhaus were a wise investment." Critics of the Mayor continue to claim that similar improvements could have been implemented more cheaply if the Mayor had not insisted on aesthetically focused, design-forward solutions.

The religious sect known as the Meek, a group which believes that the Blight is the rightful inheritor of the Earth, has been active on Life Lines message boards claiming responsibility for this act of Terror.

LastMan, a common contributor to Meek-focused Life-Lines boards, wrote "We need to recognize that humans are an outmoded form of life. We need to evolve."

MORE THAN LICE

The DHQS would like to remind you that lice isn't the worst thing that can happen to people with long hair.

If you are going to be near areas with risks of Casualties, please remember to cut your hair short!
